LOCKED IN

Tuscon, Ariz — Stepping into a telephone booth, Frank McKulsky, 15, put through a call to his girlfriend.

Thirty minutes later McKulsky ended his chat, stepped out of the booth, and noticed that he was the only one in the store. He went to the front door, but it was locked. The boy then called police, who in turn got in touch with the owner of the store, and the latter made a special trip down to let the youth out.

Farm Bureau Dinner

The annual dinner of the members and guests of the Farm Bureau was held on the past Friday evening at the Parkway Restaurant. The dining hall was filled to its capacity. Mr. Jim Smith, our County Agent, gave thanks to the one above for His generosity in bestowing upon us our many blessings. A delicious dinner was served and enjoyed.

Following the dinner, Mr. Walter Henry, president of the Farm Bureau of Appomattox County, extended warm welcome to the members and guests present. He introduced Mr. Hiriam Zigler Field, field manager of the Farm Bureau of Southeastern Virginia. He then introduced Mr. Cullen Johnson from the Farm Bureau office in Richmond. This gentleman is known for his interesting jokes, a good voice for singing, a pleasant personality and an ability to hold the attention of an audience to the very last of his discourse. Some of the highlights of his talk were, that the Farm Bureau is an organization of individuals, each having a voice in all issues presented. Also it is the largest farm organization in the world; and is composed of people such as those who helped establish America and sustain its traditional ideas.

Mr. John Putney, insurance adjuster of the Farm Bureau, gave a brief summary of the services the Farm Bureau offers in the insurance field.

Mr. Jim Smith presented Mr. Clarence Moore with an award he had won in the 20 ton silage contest.

A drive for new members was discussed and planned. Thus another one of those memorable meetings of farm folk came to a close, and with the thought of Browning, "God made the country, man made the town."

VIRGINIAN HOME

Mrs. Audrey S. Robinson

Vepco Home Economist

I hope some of you had the same good fortune that I did this year from Santa, and received a new automatic washer and dryer. This is truly the season of the year that we appreciate such things!

With many of today's clothes being "Wash 'n Wear," I thought I would like to chat about that this week. A number of the washers available today have a wash and wear cycle, designed for use with this type of fabric. This cycle means that cold water is introduced into the warm or hot wash water, just before the spin starts. This prevents the wrinkling of the man-made wash and wear fabrics that might occur if the spinning took place when the clothes were still hot.

In selecting wash and wear clothing, be sure to buy good quality. Look for blends that have 50% or more of the synthetic fiber. More is necessary to hold sharp pleats, etc., the life of the garment. For instance, a pleated skirt that I have is a jersey of 80% orlon and 20% wool. The pleats stay in place when either dry-er- or drip-dried. A blouse of 100% dacron crepe has been through years of washing, and never requires ironing. Other types of wash and wear do often require "touch up" ironing to look their best.

Many cottons and some rayons are being treated with resin finishes to be wash and wear. Follow closely the instructions on the label, in laundering these. For instance, many times the label will say not to use chlorine bleach with resin finished cottons, as it will turn them yellow. However, an oxygen type bleach may be used on this clothing.

The girls in some of the home economics classes in Appomattox High School will remember the "experiment" we did, by placing chlorine bleach on a wash and wear garment whose label said not to use chlorine bleach. Of course it turned that spot yellow.

I hope this helped them to remember, along with their mothers, that labels do contain important information. Nowhere is this more true than in the selection and care of wash and wear clothing, so present in this era.

A laundry file of labels from wash and wear garments will save taking a chance on laundry methods. When you remove the tags, write a description of the garment on the tag, and file as you do recipes. I have found this to be very valuable at times.

Stores in Appomattox are carrying fabrics of wash and wear material for home sewing, as well as a selection of ready-made clothing that is wash and wear.
